

FAIR Emma, fair, not walk the green; With gait divine and heavenly mien; But learn by shepherd's foot...

When fleet evening calm'd my mind, To contemplation much inclin'd; Mid Dian's love-sick rags...

I saw a Robe of haunting hue, Blush through the fragrance of the dew, A daisy in a grove...

With food embrace I sought to hide, The fool of all the raptate tribe, Within my regard heart;

All hearts maid, angelic fair, Oh! a sweet soul from deep despair, And draw the Thorn from love...

THE COLUMBIAN OBSERVER. THREE NUMBERS. GREAT GOOD THOUGHTS ON GREAT GOOD BREEDING.

It is certainly a matter of no trifling importance to every man, be his situation or rank in society what it may, to be cheered with well bred. This being conceded, I shall without farther apology, lay down a few rules, which, if properly attended to, cannot fail of proving serviceable to the young scholar or inquisitive man...
