

EXCAVATION 210-S (ORIGINAL NORTH WALL)

Removing the plaster and lath against the south wall of this room exposed the rear wall of the original house (photos 40 & 41), sheathed with flush boards, beveled on top and bottom, and virtually identical to those on the facade excepting the absence of horizontal score marks. The boards are attached with rose-headed wrought nails and show no evidence of painting.

Identical boards were discovered farther down this wall, beneath the casing of the attic door, during work in 1982 (A in photo 39, undated).
